A DUEL.

A Press Man and an Army Officer Fight at 20 Paces.

By a special dispatch of the 26th we learn that a duel was fought in Washington yesterday between an officer of the regular army on duty there and whose name could not be ascertained, and Phil. Forney, a son of the Hon. J. W. Forney, the weapons being pistols at 20 paces. Three shots were fired, by which Forney was twice wounded and the officer once but neither fatally. It is thought Forney may lose his hand. The principals were eager to fight the quarrel out, but, after blood had been drawn on both sides, the seconds interfered, and declared that as the gentleman's honor had been maintained, they should be satisfied. The slight misunderstanding arose in the dining room of the Willard Hotel, a lady being in the case, and the quarrel could only be adjusted by the rigors of the code. Forney's second was Richard T. Shelly, of New Orleans, a former correspondent of the Philadelphia Press, Washington Chronicle, and New York Tribune.

HORRIBLE DEATH.

An Aged Negro Woman Burned to a Crisp.

From the Louisville Courier-Journal of the 28th, we learn that one of the most shocking occurrences we have for a long time been called upon to record, happened yesterday about 5 o'clock, in the district known as Butchertown, in the upper part of the city. A small cabin on the premises of Mr. William H. Klooz, occupied by an old and decrepid negro woman, named Phebe Tyler, was discovered to be on fire. As soon as possible, water was brought and the flames were quickly extinguished, but not until the poor old creature, who had been alone in the cabin, had been burned to death. She was found lying on her face, and was supposed to have fallen in an attempt to save herself by running out. She had evidently fallen asleep in her chair while sitting near the grate, and her clothes had doubtless taken fire. The floor was burned beneath her, and part of her bed was consumed.

GRANT AS A WEDGE.

Possibility of a Split Among the Radicals in Congress.

Washington Correspondence of the New York World, Dec. 23.]

It is believed that a possibility exists of a split among Congressmen on the question of burdening or unhanding Grant, which will even show itself this session. In the Senate such a split is already but half concealed. The cause of difference is upon the bill transferring the Indian Bureau to the War Department. Wilson, as the mouthpiece of Grant, presses the transfer, and Henderson, Morrill, Thayer, all the members of the Indian Committee, oppose the transfer, knowing that they are opposing the wish of Grant, and insisting that the time has not come for him to begin to shape legislation; and the introduction of his name by Wilson, if authorized, bodes no good in the future, and should be repelled at once. It is evident that Gen. Grant intends to suggest to the next Congress all that his indirect influence fails to secure from this. It is conceded here that he will accept no shackles, and that he declares the civil tenure bill, meant to hedge an untrustworthy executive, is in its very animus an insult to himself if continued. It is believed that Gen. Grant's desire will kill Conklin's bill, and that the Forty-first Congress will assemble under the present law; but such a result will only be adopted to avoid the trouble of coming together a little later by proclamation, and it settles none of the questions on which difference between Grant and the party is probable in the immediate future.

LAURA RENO.

An Incident at the Funeral of the New Albany Victims.

Miss Laura Reno, the sister of the victims of the New Albany assassination, who was in the city yesterday, is described by those well acquainted with her as a young lady of great beauty and accomplishments. It is also said that she possesses a large part of the brains of the family, which, added to an inflexible will and an intense desire for revenge, will sooner or later bring ruin or death upon some of the murderers of her brothers. At their funeral at Seymour, a few days ago, the attendance was quite large, and, among other persons, a resident of Seymour dropped in. He had scarcely made his appearance, before Miss Reno rose from her seat, and walking across the room, fiercely told him that that was no place for him, that she recognized in him one of the murderers of her brother, and if he did not leave immediately it would be the worse for him. The fellow slunk out of the house like a whipped cur, frightened almost to death. Unless a great mistake has been made in the estimation of Laura Reno's character, the Jackson County Regulators will find that the oath of revenge she is said to have taken over the dead body of Frank Reno, was no mere empty threat to be forgotten in an hour, but a promise of terrible meaning.

DON'T.

The Wedding Presents Custom.

Society invests persons who are engaged to be married with such extravagant interest and such extraordinary pretensions, that we must not be surprised if it positively confers upon them the privilege it has long withdrawn from its sovereign, the privilege of raising taxes without the intervention of any legislative authority. Like the royal rights they have survived, these fiscal contributions, raised by young ladies from their lieges on the eve of their wedding, are adroitly made to assume the character of benevolence. They are called presents, and are, with an exquisite avoidance of their compulsory nature, invariably alluded to as spontaneous offerings. But a very slight practical acquaintance with the mode in which they are levied, and the genuine feelings of the unhappy individual from whom they are extorted is enough to convince anybody that they are no more free gifts than were those additions to the royal exchequer in the time of the Tudors to which we have already compared them. What can't be cured must be endured; and we have no expectation of seeing these forced benevolences abolished. But what can't be cured can sometimes be mended. Count Figuerola has just done away with the octroi duties in Spain, and substituted a mixed house and poll-tax in their stead. Cannot something similar be done in this matter of wedding presents? Why should not a man be made to contribute in proportion to the rent he pays for his house and the number of people in it—so much per baby, say? Let there be no more gimcracks and fallals. Let there be good money down. No more Apostle spoons and Evangelist mustard-pots. Hard cash is what we advocate. Uncle and aunt very often, as it is, make their wedding presents in that form, telling the young folks to buy what they like with it. Suppose we all do the same? If it be objected that they would not like to take money from strangers, all we can say is, try them. They do take it now in a disguised form. And supposing they were to be sensitive about plain, visible coin of the realm, would many people be sorry, we wonder?—Imperial Review.

THAD. STEVENS.

An Inkling of his Real Character.

The Washington correspondent of the Cincinnati Commercial writes:

The Cave of the Winds has for hours been blowing a solemn dirge over the demise of old Sarcastic, commonly called the Old Man Eloquent, or the Great Commoner. I suppose my friend Mungen might be styled the great uncommoner. What the old scratch makes people indulge in this sort of stuff bothers me. The old man eloquent is a quotation from Milton, and when first applied to John Quincy Adams was well enough, but it is not applicable to the late Thaddeus. He was seldom, if ever, eloquent. He was sarcastic and bitter, and could make the fur fly when so disposed, but to please, penetrate and persuade, that was not his forte.

He was a grand old man in his way, but one would never find it out from the flood of sickening eulogy that rolled out to-day. Good Lord, when will we have done with these windy platitudes? How old Thad. would have grinned had he been present, and how he would have collapsed the pots of honey with a few words of sarcasm edging the lump of truth. How a little truth about the old man would have startled the House. Had his daily and nightly life been photographed for a moment, how each member would have started as if a slander was being newly promulgated. And yet each mother's son of them all knew the story of his life. And so we make history. And in such history we lose the lesson and belittle the actor. Take these eulogies and make up from them, if you can, the real life of Thad. Stevens, as he hobbled into the House from a night of cards, and hour after hour frightened and coaxed, and bullied and controlled the members, and controlled them along the path of humanity. His acts were grand, but his ordinary life was not grand, nor even good. And yet, taking it all in all, it was human, and when we see what he did, it is well to know, for his credit, that to accomplish the good he had to swing out from much that was bad in his own nature. When will these people learn, that while we sympathize with and even love defective humanity, we cannot comprehend, nor admire, and far less love the gods of their poor creation.

Poor old Thad.—he left a vacancy in the House of Representatives that cannot well be filled.

"Who will carry me, boys," he said, with his grim smiles, to the men who brought him to the Capitol for the last time on their shoulders, "who will carry me when you are dead?"

The grass is not yet green above his grave, and we are forgetting him in these high wrought eulogies.

A MODERN BORGIA.

Mary Jeanneret, the Swiss Poisoner.

How She Reveled at the Death of Her Victims.

At Geneva, on the 23d of November, proceedings commenced against one of the most monstrous women that ever lived. The trial was terminated on the 26th, by her condemnation to twenty years' imprisonment with hard labor. The name of the monster is Mary Jeanneret. She comes of a respectable family; is thirty-two years old, and wears green spectacles on account of an alleged disease of the eyes. She simulated a weakness of her eyes in order to procure some atropine, an alkaloid prepared of belladonna, which is a very virulent poison. By an uncommon knowledge of the medical terminology, fine manners and a very insinuating demeanor, she succeeded in gaining the confidence of the druggists and physicians at Geneva, and she treated the patients intrusted to her care in the hospitals and in private families with the solicitude of a mother. She was first employed in a private hospital. Two of the elder inmates—a man and his wife—soon died; afterwards their daughter, and in the end the landlady herself. Nobody appears to have suspected her, but an unknown hand wrote the celebrated verse of Dante on the entrance door of the hospital:

Voi ch'entrate, lasciate ogni speranza.

Jeanneret afterwards entered the house of the painter Bourcart. His mother-in-law was sick, and soon after the arrival of Jeanneret suffered from terrible nervous fits. She felt an unconquerable apathy against the new nurse, and the painter, who suspected her of mischievous deeds, dismissed her, though in a polite manner. But he did not lose sight of her, and soon learned that two persons, who were intrusted to her care in the family of a Mr. Gross, had died. A young lady who had visited the patients and took tea with them, was also affected by very singular symptoms, and Jeanneret said to the domestics: "You see, that girl has the same disease as our ladies; all three will probably die." The physician who treated this young lady recognized that she was poisoned by belladonna, and he saved her. He spoke with the nurse about the case, but she answered so promptly and judiciously all the questions that he did not suspect her in the least. The nurse, nevertheless, felt afraid of a discovery and soon disappeared. The painter, Bourcart, heard of all these cases, and denounced the woman to the State's Attorney. She had just poisoned another woman who was seized by a hysteric delirium in consequence of the use of a medicine administered to her by Jeanneret. She was surprised in her room before she could conceal the vials containing the atropine.

It was proved during her trial that she was a hysterical person. She had consulted a great many physicians in regard to her imaginary diseases. She feigned to have constant trouble with her eyes, but an oculist soon discovered that her eyes were in a perfectly normal State. She used atropine immoderately on her eyes, and begged of one of her physicians to apply a hot iron to her shoulders.

By one of the witnesses she was described as a model nurse, who could during seven consecutive nights stay with a sick person without falling asleep a single moment. But when her patients died in convulsions, she constantly smiled, and even broke out for a moment in loud laughter. As she used the atropine always for the eyes, she agreed that she might have made a mistake and given it in lieu of other medicine to her patients. Sometimes she said she gave them belladonna in small doses to do them good; never with the intention of killing them "with these things." Her behavior as a woman was otherwise faultless, with this exception: everybody who knew her described her as the greatest liar on earth.

Was she sane? Was she possessed of a monomania? The public accuser did not believe it. Faithlessness, perseverance, cunning and audacity, he said, were combined in that woman, and if there were any intoxication of her senses it was the intoxication of crime, which silenced her conscience. He asked the Court to condemn her to death.

She was very ably defended, and the assertion of her legal adviser that she had watched the dead bodies of those whom she was suspected of having poisoned alone during the subsequent night, and that she on those occasions never showed the least symptom of fear or remorse, made a deep impression upon the audience. But it was in vain that he tried to prove her innocence. The jury declared that Mary Jeanneret was guilty of having poisoned eight persons, and found her "not guilty" in regard to the young lady who was poisoned and afterwards saved. But it admitted "extenuating circumstances," whereupon the Court condemned her to twenty years hard labor.

Fortunately such cases do not occur often. But, whenever they attract public attention, the question always arises whether the insanity, in which such a series of crimes can only originate, is not precisely the state of mind which induces the perpetration of every crime, and which is only the highest degree of the animus criminalis. Whether it is rapacity or the morbid and horrible delight in the convulsions of a dying victim, which drives such a monster to commit a murder, is a matter of little moment. To the candid mind both are insane conditions, but it is an insanity which falls under the application of criminal punishment. In this sense penitentiaries are indeed nothing but insane asylums. If they are not, it would be good policy to make them so.

ANOTHER ACCOUNT.

If De Quincey were now alive (says an English paper), he might write a companion essay to the one on Murder as one of the Fine Arts—taking for his theme Murder as a Pastime, and illustrating it by a case which has just happened at Geneva. A woman named Janneret, thirty-two years of age, whose employment was that of nursing the sick, has just been found guilty of nine murders. She was a clever woman, with a highly nervous and excitable organization, and she seems to have had no other motive for her crimes than a morbid love of the excitement of murder and a grim delight in witnessing the sufferings of her victims. The unusual fatality of patients nursed by her drew the doctor's attention, and it was found that she gave them atropine, the active principle of belladona. She did not deny that she had given the narcotic, and of course pleaded that she had done so to produce sleep and lull restlessness. But it was clear that she knew the sleep she produced to be that which knows no waking. Brought into the presence of the exhumed corpses of her victims she showed no signs of horror, and went through her trial with complete coolness and self-possession.

Yet the woman was no mere monomaniac. She had all her faculties about her and the only rational theory of her crime was that she had taken to it for amusement. A kind of gambling passion had taken that direction, and had gained entire mastery of her. The case is a rare, but by no means unique example of the possibility that all feeling may be lost in one over-mastering passion. Fortunately, such passion is generally some form of self-indulgence, and it rarely happens that any human being is sufficiently callous to indulge a passion for murder.

THE FATE OF THE NEGRO.

Ancient Slaves and their Descendants.

From the New York Daily Bulletin.]

The Norfolk Journal makes the following interesting statements concerning the negro slaves of antiquity:

"When Rome conquered the city of Carthage and its dependent territory, there were many negroes captured who were slaves to the whites of Africa. These were carried to Rome and sold there. After that period there were always numbers of black slaves in the city and its immediate neighborhood as long as the empire lasted. There are no data by which we can judge of the hundreds of thousands of these negroes in Rome; but from the incidental mention made of them in the Latin authors, they must have been numerous. In the centuries from their first importation to the end of the empire, there must have been at least a million brought into Italy, though this is most probably but a very moderate estimate. These must have mixed in with the white race to such an extent that under the empire there must have been many mulattoes. What has become of this negro blood? There is certainly no trace of it now to be found in Italy, whose inhabitants are as entirely free from the slightest taint of it as are those of Sweden. The theory that it might have been so diluted with white blood as to be at this time untraceable, is simply absurd; for every one who has studied the subject of races, or observed the effect of mixture, knows that the original type, if it exists at all, will crop up from time to time in a most unmistakable manner, down to the thousandth generation. In Egypt there were also immense numbers of slaves imported from the negro tribes on its borders, from the days of the early monuments down to the present time. But though there exists a few mulattoes descended from the importation of the last two hundred years, yet among the bulk of the inhabitants of Egypt there are no traces whatever of negro blood. Indeed, considering the large number of negro slaves in Egypt at all times, this freedom from admixture in that country is even much more remarkable than in the case of Italy. There is one way of accounting for these facts, and but one, and that is, that so different are the Caucasian and African races that they cannot be permanently mingled together. The mixture produces a being which, if not a partial hybrid, is at least so subject to disease that it can be propagated to but a few generations, when it dies out. We see this tendency in this country almost forcibly shown in the small number of the descendants of mulattoes. Now and then we see a quadroon in Virginia, very seldom an octaroon, and beyond that degree the blood cannot be said to exist at all. It is this tendency of the mongrel to die out that has destroyed all traces of negro blood among the Indians and Egyptians. Those of them who sprung from negroes died out many centuries ago, leaving the original stock as perfectly pure as if there had never been an African imported into either Rome or the Kingdom of the Pharaohs."

We do not think it logical to infer from these facts that the negro race in America is about to share a similar fate. The climate of the Southern States seems peculiarly suited to them, and they have lived here long enough to have become thoroughly acclimated. Intermarriage with the whites is so contrary to the usages of Southern white society that it will probably never receive any encouragement, and while the negro race remains pure it will have its work to perform in the South, as important as that of the immigrant classes of the North. It is idleness and the want of a fixed social and industrial status, that most demoralizes a race or people, and hastens their decline and ultimate disappearance. While negroes are employed in the rice, cotton and tobacco culture of the Southern States, they will retain their present position as a distinct and separate race. When they are no longer needed as laborers in some branch of productive industry, they will die out and disappear. This we believe to be the true solution of the political problem that puzzled the wise heads of the country for so long a time. It would be easy to instance historical precedents in support of our opinion, but none are needed except those already given by the Journal. The history of Rome and Egypt prove that the negroes last as long as they were needed, and then pass away, in accordance with a well defined but not well understood law of the Divine economy. This law applies not only to the negro, but to all classes of men alike. The vitality of a race seems to be drawn, to a great extent, from its surroundings. Under some circumstances they will develop into a powerful and influential race; under others, they will gradually become extinct. This depends on the character and importance of the work they have to perform, as a race or a nation, far more than on their political status as compared with that of other races or nations. The negro race in America is now an important element of Southern society, and their labor is the foundation on which the whites of that section must build up the agricultural importance that must for a long time, at least, be the main source of their financial prosperity. If manufacturing interests supercede those of agriculture in the South, the negro may no longer have a place in society, and from that time we may date the decline that will end in his disappearance.

A MISSING PAPER.

Proclamation of Lincoln Dismembering the Union.

WASHINGTON, December 26.—A letter in the Evening Express of to-day, the writer of which is vouched for by the editor as being entirely trustworthy, makes the statement that there are certain missing records from the archives of the Government, and the writer says that he is well aware that the statement he makes will in some quarters awaken incredulity, in others a fear of further disclosures, while the general public will give neither thought nor attention to it; but he affirms the truth of his statement. The report is that when Judge Campbell, of South Carolina, was in Washington attempting to arrange terms for the separation of his State from the Union, President Lincoln prepared a proclamation, the purport of which is given below. The writer says:

"Shortly after the breaking off of efforts to avert the dire catastrophe of war a gentleman having free access to the private office of President Lincoln repaired to the capital of South Carolina and deposited with a high official of that State a manuscript proclamation by President Lincoln duly prepared and ready for his signature announcing it to the American people that rather than plunge the country in civil war the Executive Government acquiesced in the dismemberment of the Union. With this was a column of editorial in slip form with corrections, supposed to be Mr. Lincoln's, reciting freely the words of the instrument indicating the Executive act and challenging for it the approval of the American people. This is my statement of the missing record. That it was not issued was due to the intense feeling awakened by the firing on the Star of the West."

FLORIDA.

Origin of the Squabble Between Reed and Gleason.

Gov. Reed, of Florida, "at the earnest request of leading colored men" in Jacksonville, as we learn from the Florida Union, addressed a public meeting in his own defense last Monday. In his speech, Gov. Reed accounts for the "milk in the cocoa-nut" of the Florida impeachment, in part, as follows:

The Legislature had authorized the issue of bonds to the amount of $300,000, and they were anxious to control these bonds. Gleason went to Washington and arranged the following programme with a party there: This party was to take all the bonds at seventy cents—or, rather, they were to be pledged to him in advance at that price. Then he was to buy up State scrip at fifty or sixty cents or as low as he could get it, and pay for the bonds in this scrip. In this way he would actually get the bonds at about thirty cents on the dollar, making an immense profit out of the transaction, and Gleason proposed to me that the bonds should be disposed of in this way, and that the profits should be divided between us. I refused to sanction such a robbery upon the people, and so I must be removed, in order to enable Gleason to get the bonds under his own control, to dispose of for the profit of the ring. And how had I offended Senator Osborn? I had refused to make appointments at his dictation, and so allow him to control the State, regardless of my own judgment; but, worse than this, I had blocked one of his schemes for plunder. Senator Osborn proposed to me that we should obtain from the United States Government the grant of a large tract of land at Pensacola, for the State, and that I should then influence the Surveyor General so that this land might be sold at a mere nominal price to Senator Osborn. I refused to countenance this scheme, and so I must be removed, that a more pliant tool might take my place, and the ring might plunder to its heart's content.

Stonewall Jackson at Fredericksburg

Pollard, the historian, in the November number of Putnam's Magazine, asserted that Stonewall Jackson, after the battle of Fredericksburg, proposed to strip the troops, arm them with bowie knives and attack the enemy by night. This brought out a correspondent of the Savannah News, who contended that Stonewall only desired to strip his men to their waists. The two communications have elicited a letter from Gen. Early, who was a Major-General under Stonewall Jackson, who successfully exposes and ridicules the foolish romance. We think, says the Columbus (Ga.) Sun, this stripping and bowie-knife business originated in this city. A distinguished but somewhat eccentric physician, well known to our readers, had an idea that McClellan's army, then before Richmond, could be annihilated by a night attack of this character. He reduced his views to writing, and, if we are not misinformed, forwarded this manuscript to President Davis.

WOLFE'S
Schiedam Schnapps.

THE above Medicinal Beverage is manufactured by the proprietor, at his distillery, in Schiedam, Holland, expressly for medicinal use.

It is now some twenty years since the proprietor first introduced it to the American public, and during that time he has received over three thousand letters from physicians, indorsing it as the purest liquor they have ever used in their practice.

It is made from barley of the finest quality, selected with great care from the products of the most celebrated grain-growing districts, is flavored with the essence of the aromatic juniper-berry of Italy, and is rectified by a peculiar process, which expels from the spirit every acrid particle.

As a means of preventing and correcting the disagreeable and often dangerous effect produced upon the stomach and bowels by a change of water—a visitation to which travelers, new settlers, and all unacclimated persons in the West, the South, and Southwest are peculiarly liable—the SCHIEDAM AROMATIC SCHNAPPS will be found absolutely infallible; while in cases of dropsy, gravel, obstructions of the kidneys, diseases of the bladder, stricture, dyspepsia and general debility, it is recommended most emphatically by the most distinguished members of the medical profession.

It is put up in quart and pint bottles, in cases, with the name of the undersigned on the bottle and cork, and a fac-simile of his signature on the label. For sale by all respectable druggists and country merchants.

MEMPHIS APPEAL

WEDNESDAY MORNING, DEC. 30, 1868

CONVENTION OF THE DEMOCRACY OF ARKANSAS.

On the 8th of January next the Democracy of Arkansas will assemble in convention at Little Rock, for the purpose of taking into consideration the present condition of that State, and of memorializing the Legislature for relief from the grievances now afflicting its people.

We agree with our correspondent that there is little hope of redress for grievances, or a suspension of their infamous conduct by the Radical government of Arkansas; yet we think it proper the Democracy should meet, not to sue for mercy where it will be denied, but to fearlessly and fully express their condemnation of the atrocities of UPHAM and CATTERSON, and the infamous conduct of CLAYTON in employing these wretches to wreak political and party vengeance upon a quiet, order-loving and peaceable people. It is due to the great body of the citizens of Arkansas that the Democratic party of that State should speak in their behalf, and condemn the robberies and murders, that even by Radical confession, have characterized the militia and disgraced their abettors—the Governor and Legislature.

Energetic, yet dignified, should be the protest of the Democracy against these wrongs; and firmly, as determinedly, they should demand the punishment of all evil-doers under the guise of militia, security for the future and immunity from the ruffianism which has disturbed the peace, broken up the trade of the State, retarded immigration, entailed ruin upon its reviving agricultural interests and induced feuds where the war and its horrors had been well-nigh forgotten. This, we conceive to be the true work of the Democratic Convention of Arkansas. In the faithful performance of it they will be upheld by all law-abiding citizens and hailed by Conservatives in all the States as the only body authorized to speak for their sorely-tried people.

THE PROPOSED STATE OF EAST TENNESSEE.

The defeat of "the ring," by the shelving of the Omnibus bill, was the defeat of East Tennessee; at least, so the people of that part of the State interpret it. As a consequence, we have the old idea of separation from the Middle and Western divisions of the State. The Nashville Banner is in favor of it, and BROWNLOW—who is sore all over about the Omnibus defeat, and begins to fear the expose of RUTTER in reference to the School fund—seconds the motion, and challenges its adoption by the Legislature, after the holidays. We, too, would favor this division, and demand the removal of the capital to Memphis, (the real metropolis of the State) but that, realizing the dearth of amusements to which we are now generally reduced, we desire to keep on hand (as dealers in the ardent say) the genuine East Tennessee article, full of fire, and bottled in the shaky yet tenacious person of Parson BROWNLOW. Without the East, Tennessee would, like a jug handle, (following out our East Tennessee simile) be all on one side. Even the stale variety of the present would be preferable to a condition that would leave us no other alternatives than peace and plenty and the high privilege of taxing ourselves. After three years of the mild and benevolent sway of the Parson, costing only a matter of $18,000,000, three-fourths of it drawn from the Middle and West, which he so heartily despises, we would scarcely be equal to the task of self-government, and would be forced to call upon the Parson-Governor-Senator, Omnibus-bill-manager and School-fund-Custodian to "lend us a hand" in the task he would make difficult by withdrawing his strength, his dignity, his counsel and advice from us. But we do not believe, even though we read it over his own signature, that the Governor seriously meditates the division of the Tennessee he wrested from the hands of his rebel enemies. We do not believe he would so easily resign a plum of so much nutriment for himself and his co-adjutors. There are other things besides omnibus gratuities to be drawn from this Tennessee, and no one in all its breadth and length knows that better than the palsied Governor who, in making the proposition of separation, is simply playing possum. East Tennessee has other fish to fry than those that were tied up in the omnibus rag, and she will never consent to the separation, even though BROWNLOW say so, until, "little and big," they are done brown, and the people of Middle and West Tennessee with them. But, even though in earnest, we object to a separation for the reasons assigned, and because we have no element in this latitude, not even among the Radical confreres of BROWNLOW and his East Tennessee Radicals, that could furnish the "hell fire," and all that sort of thing, which has formed the staple commodity of the Governor in his dealings with our people. We have got used to it and almost feel like letting East Tennessee make the omnibus draft upon the Treasury and bankrupt us, rather than let her go whose prosperity is in great part due to the fostering care and benevolence of the hated and despised opponents of the omnibus iniquity in this and the Middle division of the State. We want East Tennessee.

IT IS unofficially but decidedly announced in Washington that the case of JEFFERSON DAVIS will not be advanced upon the calendar of the Supreme Court, since the amnesty proclamation has placed it in a condition to wait its turn.

VAN WYCKE'S REPORT.

We have before us a malignant, partisan report, made to the House of Representatives by a Mr. VAN WYCKE, on the Whisky Frauds of New York city. The drift of the document is a low and base attack on the President, as unfounded in justice and fact as it is reeking with venom and the slime of factious misrepresentation and abuse. This contemptible tool of Radicalism over does the work assigned him in this case, and the report needs no refutation other than is carried palpably on the face of every line and sentence of it.

To what miserable depths of party meanness and malignity will not Radicals descend? To what extent will they not go, when the baseness of partyism is to be subserved? Not content with robbing the President of the authority delegated to him by the Constitution—depriving him of the power to remove corrupt or incompetent officials—we find them now engaged in the ignoble purpose of hatching up falsehoods and misrepresentations of the grossest hue, with the unworthy design of casting reflections upon him for the perpetration of frauds which he had been purposely deprived of all means of preventing. Under the tenure-of-office bill the President has no power to remove an official unless the Senate—a body composed in the main of very small partizan politicians—should condescendingly give their assent and concurrence! We have the result before us. The Federal offices are almost exclusively in the hands of Radicals; and clothed in the garments of their party they fatten on corruption, well knowing they have a sympathizing Senate to protect them in their dishonesties and shield them from executive vengeance.

ANDREW JOHNSON has been the subject of the most foul and envenomed calumny ever heaped upon the head of any man since HENRY CLAY descended to the tomb, followed by many of the same bloodhounds and slanderers. But, amid all the charges they hurl at him, not one of these Radical maligners have dared insinuate corruption against the man whose hour of retiracy from office they look forward to with longing, fearful as they yet are of the scrutinizing supervision of the patriot President.

THE Philadelphia Age thinks, (we believe,) that President JOHNSON will veto the negro militia bill, on the ground that Congress has no power over the State militia, and no grant to organize can be given, as no prohibition to do so has ever been constitutionally valid. The bill is designed to give to political organizations power to equip the worst elements of the community into armies, at the expense, substantially, of the Federal Government, as it is intended to distribute arms from the War Department. The President also thinks the right of the Southern people to bear arms inheres in them as United States citizens, and permission or declaration of such a right by Congress is gratuitous. The President is understood to be in favor of the repeal of all acts which will deprive Southern States of equal rights; Louisiana, Florida, the Carolinas and Alabama are allowed, in the act, to reorganize their militia, and Georgia, Texas and Virginia are debarred from such a plain right. The effect of the militia bill proposed to be forced upon the South will be most disastrous. As in the case of Tennessee and Arkansas, corrupt and ambitious partizans will say what organizations shall have arms, and thus they can at all times coerce the people into their measures, just as they have done in Augusta, Ark. When it is considered that a large portion of the militia will be ignorant and prejudiced negroes, like those who yesterday occupied Hopefield, Ark. with their passions heated and inflamed by the arts of demagogues, the danger to the whole country of the measure now proposed by the Radicals in Congress can be fairly measured.

THE "Anniversary Proclamation" was generally very well received in Washington. Members of the Supreme Court, Cabinet and military and naval officers and many private citizens, called upon President JOHNSON on Christmas day, and congratulated him upon the document and the appropriateness of that day for its promulgation. BUSTEED, of Alabama, under charges of official corruption, criticised it severely, and is opposed to its provisions of "peace and good will" to the exiled public men of the South; but, on the other hand, we hear of many Radical Senators giving it their approval, and suggesting legislation in Congress in consonance with its spirit. Senator FERRY, it is said, will at an early day introduce a bill for the purpose of removing all disabilities whatever from persons who participated in the rebellion, asking, as compensation for this magnanimity, a universal suffrage amendment to the Constitution.

THE Washington National Monument Society has addressed an appeal to the pastors of the various religious congregations of the United States, asking them to cause collections to be taken up in their respective churches on the Sunday immediately preceding the 22d of February; the amount to be remitted to the Treasurer of the Society, in order that work on the monument may be resumed. The appeal is signed by ANDREW JOHNSON, President, ex-officio; S. J. BOWERS, first Vice-President; ULYSSES S. GRANT, second Vice-President; W. W. CORCORAN, third Vice-President; J. B. H. SMITH, Treasurer; JOHN CARROLL, Brevet Secretary.

BISHOP QUINTARD, of this State, makes an appeal to the benevolent, in behalf of the Colored Orphan Society, of Memphis. It has hitherto been mainly supported by the Freedmen's Bureau. This support has been withdrawn, and as there is no permanent endowment, the institution can, hereafter, be sustained only by the contributions of "the friends of humanity everywhere." The Bishop hopes for assistance from the rectors of parishes, superintendents of Sunday schools, the liberal laity of the Church, and faithful and devoted women. Contributions may be sent to the Rev. J. J. VAULX, Memphis, Tenn.

JOHN M. BINCKLEY replied, in the Washington Intelligencer of the 27th, to the report of VAN WYCKE, alluded to elsewhere, putting that person and his report, regarding the whisky frauds, in an entirely different light. The following lines occur in BINCKLEY's statement: "The guilty, therefore, brought him (VAN WYCKE) to New York, that he might employ the authority of the national legislature for their protection against the laws of the country, and indignation of its plundered people; and he did so employ it, and with success—success for the present."

IMPORTANT TO WHOM IT MAY CONCERN.

The franchise law of the State, says the Nashville Union and American, requires that the Commissioner shall keep his office at the county seat of the county, and shall attend for one day at each quarterly session of the County Court, for the purpose of issuing certificates of registration to such persons as may be entitled to them; and provides further, that for a wilful refusal so to do, he is guilty of a misdemeanor, and upon conviction, is to be removed from office and subjected to a fine of fifty dollars.

This is to notify all parties desiring certificates, that it is their duty to present themselves before the Commissioner on Monday, January 4th, with the proofs required by the act; and further, to notify the Commissioner in each county that it is their duty to be present in open office during that day; and still further, to notify the Attorney Generals of the various districts that it is their duty to enforce the execution of the law upon and against delinquent Commissioners.

THE Nashville Union and American says the suit involving the liability of the State of Tennessee for the notes of the Bank of Tennessee, now in adjudication before the Supreme Court of the United States, is No. 100 on the docket of the Court, and is expected to be heard in argument in the third week in January. The State authorities have employed counsel to argue the case, and the note-holders will be represented by several distinguished lawyers—among them the Hon. BENJ. R. CURTIS, of Boston, ex-Justice of the Supreme Court of the United States.

SENATOR HENDERSON, it is said—who volunteered to negotiate for a restoration of amicable relations between President JOHNSON and Gen. GRANT—has so far succeeded as that the latter has signified his intention of making a New Year's call at the White House; when, no doubt, the "next" President will inaugurate his "let-us-have-peace" policy by a hearty greeting of Mr. JOHNSON, whose patriotism and high-toned conservatism cannot have failed to commend him to one who, if rumor is correct, is emulous of these characteristics in the position to which he has recently been called by the people.

THE New World, a German Radical paper in St. Louis, in speaking of the disfranchisement and test oath provisions of the Missouri Constitution, says: "In their present form they are an outrage against humanity, an insult to every conception of right, and a tyranny which exists in none of the States of the South. A test oath like ours must be abolished; it is nothing except an invitation to perjury." All test oaths are instruments of tyranny, and used by bad men to effect bad results. In a Republican form of government they are the finger-posts to despotism.

A BILL recently introduced in the Senate by Mr. WILSON, of Massachusetts, providing for the retiracy of Judges from the Supreme Bench on their full salaries, after they attain the age of seventy years, is supposed to have been gotten up with a view to provide for Justices NELSON and GREER, both of whom have passed that age. The absence from the Bench of these Conservative worthies would enable the Radicals to provide for two of their partisans, and secure a majority of the Court. That's the milk in the cocoanut.

LOUISVILLE, December 29.—The river is falling, with six feet four inches in the canal.

The weather is cloudy and cool.

The steamers Emma No. 3 and Minneola arrived. Departed—Silver Moon and Tempest for Memphis and Robert Burns for New Orleans.

CAIRO, December 29.—The river is stationary.

ST. LOUIS.

ST. LOUIS, December 29.—Gen. Sherman has received dispatches from Gen. Hagen, at Fort Cobb, to the 17th inst., and also from Gen. Sheridan, to the same date.

Gen. Hagen says that since Gen. Custar's fight we have had no trouble in distinguishing between the friendly and hostile bands. He pronounces all the Cheyennes and Arapahoes unfriendly and hostile; the Kiowas are divided half and half; the Comanches are all, or nearly all, friendly to the whites; the Appaches, Kioches, Kaddoes and Wichitowas bands, numbering about 3000, are clustered around and near Fort Cobb, claiming the protection of the Government. The hostile ones have separated from the friendly tribes and gone over to the North Fork of Red river, near the mouth of Sweet Water. They number some 1000 warriors.

Gen. Sheridan was to have left Camp Supply, on the Canadian river, for Fort Cobb, on the 7th, and it was expected that in from three to five days from that date he would be able to strike the hostile Indians without interfering with the friendly tribes.

Santanta, the principal Chief of the Kiowas, is reported as not having gone to the hostile camp. Gen. Sherman, however, regards him and Big Bear as the most hostile and treacherous Chiefs on the plains, and believes that no lasting peace can be had with them at large. He has therefore given orders to kill them, or else capture and imprison them at Fort Gibson.

WASHINGTON.

WASHINGTON, December 29.—The Executive Mansion was the scene of unusual gayety and pleasure to-night. Three or four hundred children were entertained by the juveniles of the house.

Senator Morton, of Indiana, has replied to Greeley's letter addressed to him on the 21st inst., and concludes his response as follows:

"The fact is, our bondholders understand perfectly well that whatever may be said on the question, that neither the bonds or any considerable part of them can be paid in coin while the currency remains depreciated, and that it is folly to talk about paying the bonds in gold, if the Government cannot procure gold enough wherewith to redeem the greenbacks; and that the redemption of the notes and a return to specie payments is a necessary condition precedent to the payment of the bonds in gold; and they look much more to the return of specie payments and the establishment of our finances on a solid basis than to the mere form of the contract. And as to how they shall be paid, the gold payments should begin with the debt that is due—which is the currency—and not by issuing bonds that will not be due for fourteen years. The currency lies at the foundation of the whole financial structure, and if it be unsound, the structure above must be insecure and dangerous. When it becomes good by being made convertible into gold, then the national debt may be funded, by which one-third of the present volume of interest can be saved, and the nation will carry the burden with an ever increasing ease, until its final discharge shall come."

NEW YORK.

NEW YORK, December 29.—It is stated that there is not a shadow of truth in the reported basis of agreement between America and England on the Alabama claims. A messenger from Reverdy Johnson, with the papers as far as agreed upon, will arrive in Washington in a few days.

An American gentleman who recently had a conversation with Count Bismarck, gives the following as his (Bismarck's) statements of his relations with the continental powers as regards Romanism: He said he had written to Prince Charles Fellinghini to take the late King Leopold of Belgium for his model; to give up all hope of an extension of his territory, and to administer his government with a strict regard to existing European treaties, and that if he was not inclined to do this, nothing was left for him but to go home to his father. He further stated that this letter was the cause of the change just made in the policy of that Prince. Count Bismarck's representations, according to the Austrian minister here, in this proceeding, as in all of his positions towards Hungary, had the effect of causing the latter to express his satisfaction with the peaceful intentions of his government. Count Bismarck also said that the alliance with Russia was one looking to a continuance of peace, and had no reference to war, and as to the South German States, it was his intention to leave to them entirely the question of their admission to the Confederation, and that it would not be long before they would come knocking at the door, and until then he hoped that Germany would be drawn closer and closer together by common legislation and through the customs of Parliament.

A special to the Herald, from Berlin the 24th, says it is stated that the basis of the autonomy is the suspension of the energetic measures announced in the Sultan's ultimatum, and an agreement to support the just demands of Turkey.

FOREIGN.

CONSTANTINOPLE, December 29.—A circular from the Sublime Porte, just issued, confirms the report of the Sultan's refusal to participate in the proposed conference, if the Cretan question is to be discussed.

The Russian Government denies giving authority to Greek vessels to use the Russian flag for any purpose whatever.

It is confidently asserted that the Porte opposes the holding of the Conference.

PARIS, December 29.—Reports have been received here of a collision between a band of invading Greeks and a Turkish force, in the Turkish province of Albania, in which the Greeks were victorious.

The details of the conference here have been agreed upon, and the session will begin in this city on Saturday next.

The legal tribunals have forbidden the title "Moniteur" to the new official organ.

LONDON, December 29.—The emigrant ship Stony Banner, bound to New York, was totally lost in a gale on the 21st inst. 700 miles west of the coast of Ireland. Forty-two people were saved on rafts, and have arrived at Boulougne, France. The captain and remainder of the crew and passengers, 122 souls all told, were lost. Morgan Henry Jay, late of the American army, was a passenger on the ill-fated vessel, and was mainly instrumental in saving the lives of his fellow passengers. A careful consultation of marine authorities fail to show any record of any vessel of the above name, which leads to a hope that further advices may bring news of a less startling character in relation to that disaster.

Midnight.—The report of the foundering of the ship Stony Banner is a hoax, although published by the entire press of the city. The original dispatch announced the safe arrival of several passengers at Bane, but a telegram from that city, in answer to an inquiry for full particulars for the Associated Press, conveys the assurance that there had been no such arrivals.

MADRID, December 29.—Gen. Cabrello has been ordered to take troops to the provinces of Seville and Gitru, to prevent any trouble. The country however is tranquil. The government has effected a loan, with Erlanger.

FLORENCE, December 29.—Gen. Garibaldi has written a letter declining a commission in the Greek army, which was tendered him in view of the threatened war.

CANADA.

LONDON, C. W., December 29.—Jones, the murderer of his niece, was executed this morning at half-past ten o'clock. Many thousands of people were collected around the scaffold. He was attended all night by various clergymen, but denied his guilt to the last.

NEW ORLEANS.

NEW ORLEANS, December 29.—The St. Nicholas and Monsoon are reported sunk in Red river, with partial loads of cotton, making three Red river steamers sunk this month. The St. Nicholas struck on the dam at the falls, placed there by Banks' army.

STATE ITEMS.

SNOW.

The snow of Saturday last seems to have been distributed all over the State. In Nashville it fell to a depth of several inches.

SOLID MEN.

There were three men at the City Hotel at Murfreesboro, Tenn., a few days since, who weighed collectively 900 pounds, and two of whom, from Texas, weighed 640 pounds.

FROZEN TO DEATH.

Two intoxicated negroes, who lived about three miles from Franklin, lay down by the roadside on their way home last Thursday night, and next morning were found frozen stiff and dead.

SHOOTING AFFRAY.

A shooting affray occurred in Nashville last Friday, in which Mr. H. Clay Singleton, keeper of a livery stable, received a bullet in the head from a pistol in the hands of Joe Jenkins, a butcher. It was doubtful whether the wound would prove fatal.

ESCAPE OF A HORSE-THIEF.

Jim Legg, a notorious East Tennessee horse-thief, was arrested a few days ago, on a requisition from the Governor of Alabama, and was put in charge of an officer to be taken to Athens, Ala., the scene of many of his depredations. Before reaching that town he managed to make his escape by jumping from the train.

POWDER CRACKERS.

The Nashville Banner has the following cases of mischief by firing powder crackers:

A little son of Mrs. Jesse Grisham, living in South Nashville, met with an unfortunate accident on Christmas day. While popping fire crackers, the burning fuse got into one of his eyes, and it is thought that he will lose it.

Deputy Sheriff S. C. Marshall intends entering suit against the corporation for damages sustained to his horse and buggy on Thursday night last by the runaway. He will make the suit on the ground that there is a corporation law making it a penalty to shoot fire crackers in the city during holidays, and that no attempt was made to enforce the law. It will be remembered that his horse became frightened by the popping of fire crackers, in consequence of which a runaway and a smash-up occurred.

WHITE VS. BLACK—A SCRIMMAGE.

The Nashville Banner of Sunday furnishes the following account of a lively "scrimmage" between a party of whites and negroes: From Mr. Nat M. Smith, Deputy United States Marshal, we derive the following particulars of a reported affair on the Murfreesboro pike, eight miles from town, last Friday, between about a dozen negroes and four or five white men, in which four or five of the former were badly hurt. He states that a negro had a dispute with his employer, a man named Davis, in regard to the payment of the former's wages. The negro claimed that, after settlement for the past year, there was a balance due him of ten dollars, which Davis denied. The negro, much incensed, went away, but soon after appeared with about a dozen men of his own color, armed with weapons of every description, and demanded the money of Davis, on pain of having his property destroyed by fire or himself murdered. Some four white men having arrived at Davis' house during the absence of the negro, he felt more secure, and very emphatically told the gang that threats would do no good. The negro then presented a small pocket pistol and fired at Davis. The fire became general between the friends of Davis and the negroes, and was kept up until all the ammunition of the latter had been expended, when the whites, having wounded four of their antagonists, went out of the house with sticks and drove the assailants away.

THE WAR IN ARKANSAS.

Arrival of Clayton's Bummers on the Margin of the Father of Waters.

Hopefield, Marion and Mound City Occupied.

Chickens and Hogs Captured

Candies, Pickles, Sardines and Can-Fruits Gobbled.

The war in Arkansas has progressed to our own doors. The rascally irregulars of Clayton, have actually had the temerity to show themselves in sight of Memphis. They have actually shaken their "dirty-shirt" standard in our faces, and sent greeting to Brownlow, whose genius they humbly imitated. The scoundrels have captured Hopefield, Marion and Mound City, and have by this time sacked all three of these important cities and sent fleeing into the woods the inhabitants whose chickens and hogs they are now feasting upon, and whose candies and other tit-bits they have long ere this gobbled. White, black and brown, these fellows represent, we are told, the off-scourings of Arkansas, are out on a "tare," as they say, and prepared for any devilment their officers may conceive.

On Monday evening they arrived at Madison, from 160 to 200 strong, (where from it is not possible to learn, as they tell more lies than the Father of lies himself,) immediately seized the train and upon it made their advent into the quiet but deceptive Hope-field, much to the surprise of the six inhabitants of that city, two of whom happened to be abroad, waiting for sun-rise, at the time. The solitary store lasted, one may well imagine, but a short time. The tempting sardines, the many colored candies, the crackers and cheese, unknown to any ordinary commissary, soon fell, the legitimate prey of the thieves who prowl through the State with Clayton's suspension of the habeas corpus and his commission for robbery in their pockets. Replenishing their stomachs, Marion and Mound City were shortly surprised, and by a sudden coup, with many yells, captured and occupied all the live-stock on the way falling into the hands of this more than ruthless enemy. What their purpose is, beyond theft and murder, it is impossible even to surmise, as the people in the river counties of Arkansas are noted for their peaceful disposition and attention to the honest duties of life. It is hard, but we suppose the poor people overrun by these "dirty devils" will have to grin and bear it, and may thank, perhaps, their contiguity to Memphis that they are not all murdered or as horribly maltreated as Catterson does the people of the Southwest, many of whom it is said will carry to their graves the marks of his brutality. "How long! O, Lord, how long!"

BURGLARY.—The fruit stand of Mr. Barboni, on Jefferson street, between Second and Third, was broken into on Monday night and robbed of a large quantity of fruit and candy. The thieves got no money, and up to the present time have not been arrested.

CHARLEY WILLIAMS, the pioneer of meat stores, will always be most happy to see his many friends and customers at his store on Jefferson street. Everything found in the best of regulated markets you will find in his store. All should go and see him. Happy New Year to all.

Mrs. Platt is a very enterprising and successful teacher, and deserves encouragement, especially from our German citizens.

ARKANSAS.

The Present Condition of Public Affairs.

The Temper of the House of Representatives.

The Democratic Convention on the 8th January.

Special Correspondence of the Appeal.]
LITTLE ROCK, December 24, 1868.

The weather here until to-day, which is raw and windy, has been spring-like, and business such as to make this the liveliest little city in the Southwest. Only here, where we are under protection of the United States' garrison, are the people enjoying immunity from the reign of terror that exists elsewhere throughout the State. Of the necessity for the resort to military force to vindicate the authority of the Governor and his appointees who hold their places by the most outrageous political frauds that ever disgraced the usurpations of arbitrary power, I shall not speak, as the subject has two sides. There were assassinations of the officers of that usurpation, bloody and unjustifiable, except in accordance with the theory enunciated in the book which appealed heretofore to all that was fierce and tyrannous in Cromwell, entitled "Killing no Murder," and producing similar effects of a ruthless retaliation here. That there were energetic efforts to bring the guilty participators to punishment by the operation of civil law, to which the present Constitution declares the military power shall be subordinate, is not pretended. The militia, composed of men burning with local animosities engendered during the war, were called out, in lieu of such an effort, and war with its violence, its disregard of private rights and indiscriminate vengeance upon the innocent and the guilty, was declared in many of the counties, visiting its baleful effects upon all parts of the State. Government troops were offered the State authorities as possessing the prestige and discipline most likely to secure the ends proclaimed to be those that were desired. They were refused. Republicans of high standing were free to assert that the ends proclaimed were not the ends desired by the State authorities, but that public commotion as an excuse for the exercise of arbitrary power, and vast public outlays from which favorites could derive rich revenues were the real objects of the course adopted, and at the bottom of the refusal of Government troops to be commanded by Government officers. War was desired, and war was inaugurated. It cannot long continue, for there is no disposition to organize any resistance. But meanwhile every material interest of the State is suffering, and the condition of the people deplorable. The wife of the former Episcopal minister of this place, a most intelligent and accomplished lady, came down from Conway county a few days since, and informs us that no lady of her neighborhood has pretended to undress to sleep at night for weeks. The commander of the militia in that county is one of those monsters developed by the war, who, having been on both sides, and by both sides accused of murders, robberies and foot burnings without number, seeks to revenge himself among his neighbors for the disgrace to which his conduct then subjected him among them. Lewisburg has been burned, peaceable sexagenarians murdered in cold blood, and private property appropriated to the use of the ruthless and lawless oppressors. In the late proceedings of the Legislature, self-elected, a resolution to endorse the action of the authorities (?) in proclaiming martial law was vigorously resisted, and the Speaker of the House, who is the editor also of the Radical State organ and the public printer, opposed the action in very forcible and unmeasured terms as uncalled for, subversive of the letter and spirit of the Constitution, as well as of all liberty. The resolution was adopted, however.

The Democracy will meet here in Convention on the 8th of January to petition for redress of these grievances, and exhort the people to forbearance until relief can be obtained or altogether fails from some other source than the State Government. I don't think the movement will accomplish much. But I am told that during the recess which has been taken by the Legislature until the 6th, the Governor will revoke martial law. God grant that he may, as I think to God alone may we petition with any prospect of success for relief.

Very truly yours, BENADHEM.

SCENE in a public sitting room. Frenchman of the sans culotte order in a corner, smoking a short, dirty pipe. Enter a self-evident Yankee adventurer, with a stupendous shiny stovepipe towering above his soap-locks, and wrapped in a long-tailed overcoat. He walks up against the hot stove, and a thin but fragrant wreath of smoke curls upward from his coat tail to the ceiling, whereat the Frenchman replenishes his bowl with tobacco and garlic, and puffs away with the vigor of a locomotive. The column of smoke from the Yankee's coat tail assumes a darker hue, and the atmosphere of the room becomes redolent of the perfume of tobacco, garlic and burnt wool. The Yankee glances angrily at Frenchy, and profanely exclaims:

"Darn the blasted old pipe!"

The Frenchman placidly removes the stem from his mouth:

"Oui, oui, dam ze busted old pipe, and dam ze busted old coat tail, too. Here you smoke him zees ten, twenty minutes, and he stink! sacre bleu! and I nevaire say one word. I smoke my pipe; you smoke your coat tail. Boze gentlemen sall smoke zat which sall please him best."

The Yankee gave one hasty glance in the rear and sailed from the room, leaving a trail of stifling smoke behind him.

MISCEGENATION.

A Saddle-colored Damsel and Her White Lovyer.

Yesterday a damsel with well shaped features, but a complexion of about the shade of an underdone beefsteak, entered the office of 'Squire Millard with a marriage license, and wanted to know whether the legal authority of the 'Squire was available to join her in the holy bonds of matrimony to a white man, who was waiting somewhere outside to know the result of the application. She stated that she had been married once before to a white man in Arkansas, and had so good an opinion of poor white trash that she wanted to try it again. She gave her name as Miss Alice Gillespie, and, holding up her certificate, demanded of the 'Squire whatever miscegenation virtue there might be in it. The 'Squire declined having anything to do with the matter, and Miss Alice went on her way, "in maiden meditation, fancy free."

AMUSEMENTS.

NEW MEMPHIS THEATER.—In spite of stormy weather and muddy streets, a very fair audience attended last night to witness the second representation of the Lancashire Lass, a highly entertaining play. It was well cast, and the parts were well sustained throughout. With anything like fair weather, this play, as performed in these two representations, would draw crowded houses for a week. To-night Mrs. Gladstane, at the request of a large number of leading citizens, will repeat her great character of "Elizabeth," and no matter what the state of the weather, there will undoubtedly be a crowded house.

M'lle Turnour last night delighted and thrilled the audience with her seemingly impossible and really perilous feats on the flying trapeze. It is wonderful that a slender, delicate girl should have such a mastery of eye and nerve as to perform which only the boldest, iron-muscled men like the Hanlons have hitherto attempted. We trust that her marvellous skill in the art of equipoise may always carry her safely through these dangerous and exciting performances.

GAYETIES THEATER.—The opening night of this new place of amusement was greeted by a crowded house, and we dropped in for a short time to see what was going on. At great expense the lessee has fitted up this place, (Jefferson street between Main and Second,) and has made a perfect little gem of a theater of it, every part being arranged with elegance and good taste. The attractions offered by his company are, of their class, not excelled in any city. In comedy, burlesque, dance and song, appear some of the very best performers in the country, whose names are familiar to the public wherever they go. Among the talented singers we notice the name of Miss Lillie Beckett; and M'lle Barana is announced as the leading danseuse.

THE VARIETIES.—This popular resort continues to hold its own, and can hold it against all competition, with its present talented troup of artists, whose splendid vocal and instrumental attainments and unrivaled dancing are the nightly delight of a large class of play-goers.

THE ORPHANS' FAIR.

The execrable weather of last night was not bad enough to prevent a good number of the charitably disposed ladies and gentlemen of our city from attending the fair. Repeated appeals have been made to our citizens during the past ten days, in behalf of this worthy enterprise, and we are happy to state have been nobly responded to. Thus far the ladies in charge of the fair have realized a handsome amount, and we are happy to observe that as its close approaches there is no abatement of the interest, but on the contrary the last night promises to be the most remunerative of the nine. The voting for favorites was conducted with less animation than on previous nights, the friends of the contestants manifesting a disposition to hold back with their dollars, to insure success by crowding in all their money on the last night. Up to the time of our leaving the hall last night, the vote for the clock for insurance agents was as follows: Tomlinson, 66; Littleton, 29.

The voting on the valuable calendar clock for the favorite insurance agent, at the Orphans' table, up to this time, has failed to excite the interest that was anticipated. Our insurance men have failed to exert themselves in this matter, in canvassing among their friends—a fact which is rather discreditable to them—and we trust that to-night they will atone for their past indifference.

The voting on the harness produced considerable excitement, and at the close of the fair last evening, eleven o'clock, the vote stood as follows: Jno. League, 67; W. H. White, 177; M. D. L. Stewart, 31; Col. Curry, 15; G. M. Greeley, 15.

The grand raffle of ten valuable prizes at the Orphans' table is progressing rapidly, with a prospect of proving highly successful. The ladies in charge of it announce that in the event of failing to sell all the tickets to-night, the sale will be continued until all are sold before the raffle takes place. The capital prize in this scheme is a handsome silver water set, and the nine minor prizes are all valuable and worth many times the price of a chance. The beautiful orphan doll at this table was raffled last night, being won by Miss Lizzie Stoddard, a bright-eyed little girl, who well deserved it for her labors for the orphans. An elegant lace shawl was also raffled at this table, and won by Miss Lou Guthrie.

To-night closes the fair, which has been conducted with entire satisfaction to all concerned. The voting for awards has been conducted with a spirit of fairness highly creditable to those in charge, all the prizes even having been promptly and willingly delivered to the lucky winners, and nothing has occurred to displease the most punctilious. A great many articles of value remain on hand at the various tables, all of which must be disposed of to-night, either by raffle or at auction. We bespeak the attendance to-night of all those who have labored so assiduously for the success of the fair, and those who have not yet attended, we trust will no longer be indifferent to the many appeals that have been made to them in behalf of the orphans. All who visit the hall are assured of spending a pleasant evening, and by investing in any of the many schemes of chance, have a prospect of receiving more than value received in dollars and cents.

FINANCE AND TRADE.

OFFICE OF THE DAILY APPEAL, MEMPHIS, December 29, 1868.

FINANCE.

The money market to-day was quiet with no perceptible variation from yesterday except in the demand for exchange and the stiffening up in selling rates. It is not expected that the market will be well supplied in this way until after the holidays. Cotton will then commence to move, and offerings will no doubt be larger on New York and Eastern points. With this market so much better than New Orleans, it is doubtful whether any more cotton will go in that direction this season, and rates of exchange on that point will consequently be steady for some time to come at least. We quote as follows:

	Buying.	Selling
New York	⅜@½ dis.	par
New England	½@⅝ dis.	"
St. Louis	⅝ "	"
Cincinnati	½ "	"
Louisville	½ "	"
New Orleans	⅜@⅝ "	¼@$3 $1000 p'm

After the large transactions in City Bonds yesterday there has been a lull. We heard of but one or two sales to-day and they were on private terms. 52½c would be the inside buying rate, however, on orders, and it is questionable whether any amount could be had at that figure. Holders think that there will be equally as good a demand after the January coupons are paid, and that there will be but a small decline from present quotations—less than the 6 per cent accrued interest.

City Scrip is firm. Sellers are more numerous than for some days, but are unwilling to make any concessions from 80c, while one lot of $5500 is held at 81c. Tax payers also were out in larger force to-day, but they will not buy until the last hour. To-morrow and Thursday will be active days in the Scrip market. Dealers sell at 82@83c.

County Warrants are in demand at 76 to 77c from dealers who resell to tax payers at 78@80c, as to amount.

Police Scrip is firm at 93@94c, buying. Selling at 95@96c.

School Scrip is also firm. Dealers buy at 90@91c. Selling at 92@94c.

Gold opened in New York to-day at 134⅝ and closed at 134½. We note sales of $225, $160 and $300, at 134. Selling at 135.

The Commercial List in alluding to the late failures in New York says:

Two or three firms were yesterday said to be in a crippled condition; the failure of a large dry goods house, with liabilities amounting to $1,500,000, was announced. These troubles, and others which it is feared must follow, have grown out of the disorganized condition of commerce, under a fluctuating and depreciated currency, so graphically described by Senator Morton in his late speech in Congress. The fluctuations in the value of the currency affect every kind of business disastrously. Prices are constantly changing. Every branch of legitimate business is greatly impaired with such fluctuations in the value of the currency, in the cost of living, in the profits of business, and the value of everything that enters into trade, together with the painful uncertainty that hangs over the whole financial policy of that country. Men hesitate to engage in new enterprises, or to make new investments in business. The prudent capitalist is standing still, awaiting the course of events, and the establishment of some definite financial policy by which he can judge of the future. It is impossible to calculate the aggregate loss to the country, even in one year, by this state of things, or to estimate the suffering and destitution produced by the stagnation of business and the want of employment for labor; and it is not only the business, but the imperative duty of Congress to address itself to the great work of reform, by adopting such legislation, if possible, whereby the currency shall be made good, and business be made to flow on prosperously through its regular channels. We repeat what we have said many times before, that there can be no stability in trade, nor general industrial and commercial prosperity, until the great problem of how to restore the currency to a sound basis shall be solved.

In March last the Committee on Coinage of the House of Representatives reported a bill for the creation of a new system of small coins, to be composed of one-quarter nickel and three-quarters copper, and to be of the denominations of five cents, three cents, and one cent., the pieces to weigh respectively five grams, three grams, and one and a half grams. Our present five and three cent. coins are of the same composition, and the five cent. coin weighs five grams, and so that the present system will be changed as little as possible. It had been proposed to make the one cent. coin to weigh one gram, and also to have a ten cent. coin of the same alloy weighing ten grams; but on consideration, aided by examination of specimen coin of those weights, one gram was thought too light and ten grams too heavy for convenience. The Committee on Coinage had, in fact, caused many specimens of divers weights to be made, and had carefully considered all that could be said in favor of all of them before deciding upon the weights above named. This bill had in view the abandonment of all the coins below twenty-five cents now in use, and expressly provided for the discontinuance of the issue of ten cent notes, though it did not provide for the redemption of the proposed new coins by the Government. But the impeachment trial so consumed the time of the last session that no action was taken upon the bill.

Now, however, it is likely to be taken up and passed at an early day, but with several amendments or additions which further examination has shown the necessity of, chief among which will probably be a distinct provision for setting aside the profits arising from this coinage to form a redemption fund, and providing that the Treasurer of the mint shall redeem from the said fund any of these coins which may at any time be presented to him, in sums not less than a certain specified amount.

Vanderbilt is said to have made between $5,000,000 and $6,000,000 by his last stroke in New York Central.

A document just published shows the number of judgments rendered by the United States Court of Claims during the present year, the names of the parties in whose favor they were rendered, of their attorneys and the amounts awarded. The court gave favorable judgments in fifty-three cotton cases, the cotton having been captured by the United States forces. The claimants in all such suits are required to prove their loyalty to the United States at the time of the capture. The aggregate of these cotton claims is $500,000. The sums awarded range from under $1000 to $44,000. The court threw out the claims for acceptances of sundry bills of exchange, or drafts by John B. Floyd, Secretary of War.

COTTON.

The Liverpool market at the opening to-day was active. Uplands 10⅝d, Orleans 10⅞. At 1.20 it was firm, with sales of 15,000 bales; Uplands 10¾d, Orleans 11d. Shipments from Bombay from last report to 25th inst., 10,000 bales.

Cotton was in moderate demand and prices firm at the opening in New York. At noon the demand was moderate and prices advanced; Uplands 25¼@25½c. At 12.35 p. m. it was firm and in fair demand; Low Middlings 24¼c, Middlings, 25¼@25½c, Orleans 25¾@26c, Good Middlings 27c. At 2 p. m. the demand was good and prices tending upward. At 3 p. m. it was active at full prices; Uplands 25¼@25½c; and closed with a moderate demand and prices firm; Low Middlings 24½c, Uplands 25½c, Orleans 26c, Good Middlings 27c. Sales at 3 p. m. 4200 bales.

In New Orleans, at 11.30 a. m., the demand was fair and prices firm; Middling 23¾@23⅞.

In this market there was considerable inquiry and fair sales, but holders were generally too stiff to suit the terms of buyers; 24c was the asking price for Middlings, and some sales were made on that basis. There are several Eastern spinners upon the market buying quietly, and orders are here to a large amount. One operator bought during the day for direct shipment to Liverpool. All the large spinners are buying through their agents at interior points throughout the South, instead of going upon the New York market to supply their wants, and by this means are enabled to lay in their stock at prices which they could not do were they to create an active demand nearer home. We quote as follows:

Ordinary	21 @—
Good Ordinary	22½ a23
Low Middlings	23¼@23½
Middlings	23¾@24
Strict Middlings	24½@—
Good Middlings	25 @—

TRADE.

The horrible weather to-day put a damper on business of every kind, and very little was done except to fill the orders received by packets and by rail. There was nothing received from above, and prices are unchanged except on dressed meats, which are declining. Corn is also lower. A lot on levee sold at 62c. Bulk meats are firm, but there is a very light demand. Mess Pork is dull at $28 00. A round lot would not bring $27 50.

The Chinese trade with San Francisco is large and rapidly increasing, but it is yet only in its infancy. The future will see a marvelous development of commerce in the Pacific coast, and the Pacific Railroad will rob Great Britain of a vast amount of wealth derived from shipping round the Cape of Good Hope.

Large quantities of hogs are being shipped from Paducah to Louisville and Evansville. The streets are constantly lined with droves of porkers going to be shipped to the points above mentioned. The price paid gross is six cents.

The Democrat says of the Louisville hog market:

The hog slaughtering and pork packing season has dragged along very slowly this week, owing to the falling off in supplies, and all the packing houses excepting two were closed for the season early in the week. The high prices caused drovers to send all their merchantable hogs to the slaughter, with the receipt this morning of 190 head from Dick's, Tenn., averaging 280 pounds gross. Sales of extra at 9½c, and we note a sale of 600 hogs averaging 215 pounds at 8½c. We subjoin the slaughter to date as follows, omitting the details:

Total killing up to last week	159,952
Number killed last week	6 107
Number of hogs in pens	1,600
Receipts to-day	700
Total receipts to date	182,789
Same time last year	189 655

RIVER MATTERS.

WEATHER AND RIVERS.

Weather wet and disagreeable, with a drizzling rain. The river here is declining, with nine and a half feet in the channel to Cairo. At St. Louis the river is receding, with heavy floating ice, partially suspending navigation between Cairo and St. Louis. The Ohio is receding at Cincinnati, and rising slowly at Louisville, with six and a half feet in the canal. The ice in the Lower Ohio is very heavy, impeding navigation to a great extent. The Arkansas is rising, with five feet in the channel from Little Rock out, with three feet above there.

MISCELLANEOUS.

We have received the following special dispatch, dated

MOBILE, December 29, 1868.

River Editor Appeal: The steamer Jewess was wrecked this morning at three o'clock, near Meagher's Mills. She had several hundred bales of cotton aboard and forty passengers. No particulars as yet have been received. I will send later news this evening. J.

Yesterday was a disagreeable day for outdoor business, with a mist and drizzling rain throughout the day. The landing was in a deplorable condition, making it a difficult matter to handle freight.

The Silver Cloud backed out for Cincinnati last night, with 450 bales of cotton.

The Liberty No. 2 and Des Arc, for White river, and Natoma, for Friar's Point, got off last night.

The Luminary passed down for Vicksburg and the Legal Tender for New Orleans.

The Glasgow cleared for New Orleans at noon, well ladened.

The Cora S. departed for Arkansas river with a good trip.

The elegant passenger steamer Darling, Capt. Lawrence Carter, leaves to day at 5 p. m., for Cincinnati and way points on the Ohio. Mr. Powers, a whole souled gentleman and attentive officer does the honors of the office.

The Mississippi, Capt. Nat. Green, will leave the wharf Thursday evening, at 5 p. m., for New Orleans. The Mississippi is the regular packet.

The Thomas H. Allen, Capt. Reese Pritchard, is the regular Thursday Arkansas river packet. She will be found in port this morning.

The Wauanita is due from the Ohio. She was slightly perforated by the ice, above Evansville.

The Argonaut, Capt. Everhart, leaves to morrow evening at five, for Cincinnati.]

A steamboat accident, more terrible than that which recently occurred on the Ohio river, is reported by cable from the Mediterranean Archipelago, near Smyrna. The mail steamers collided so violently that more than 200 passengers are said to have been killed by the shock.

The Robert Burns and Silver Moon will be due to-morrow from the Ohio.

The Alaska, Alice Dean, Olive Branch and Peoria City are due this morning from New Orleans.

The Mary Forsyth is due from St. Louis.

The St. Nicholas, an account of the sinking of which we have already published, was insured against fire only. The loss will fall upon her owners. A hole was stove in her side about forty feet long. She lies straight across Red river with one foot of water on her main deck.

The ice in the Ohio is no longer an obstruction to navigation. It is sinking rapidly.

A young man named James Rice, who took passage on the steamer Tennessee at Hale's Point a few days ago bound to Cairo, fell overboard and was drowned. The boat was immediately stopped and the yawl sent out, but owing to the heavy ice running could not reach him. Rice had been peddling in Tennessee. His effects are in the hands of A. O. Donnell, Cairo.

Gen. Donaldson, Chief Quartermaster at St. Louis, has addressed a letter to the Board of Underwriters of that city, suggesting that the standard of Missouri river steamboats be raised, and intimating that, unless this be done and the risk of transportation on that river be diminished, the Government will look for another avenue by which to supply its military posts.

The steamer Andy Johnson, while at Quincy Bay, took fire from a defective flue, last Wednesday evening, and narrowly escaped being consumed.

The Kouns Bros., of New Orleans, have purchased the new sidewheel Selma, and will put her in the Red river trade in place of the Era No. 10.

We learn that a difficulty occurred between W. T. Hewitt, of Natchez, and George C. McKee, of Vicksburg, on board the Robert E. Lee, while lying at Natchez, on her last trip, which resulted in McKee's having his collar bone broken by a lick with a poker and Hewitt's being shot in the thigh.

The barber of the R. E. Lee shot another negro on the levee at Vicksburg on Christmas day.

"A Northern Radical," as he calls himself, has written a few truths to the Cincinnati Commercial, which we republish: That the State of Arkansas is governed by the few, is a fixed fact. And that few, in my opinion, are like "chestnut wood's" men, of a "d—d poor sort." From my own observation, with very strong prejudices to overcome, I must confess that it looks to me as though the civil government of this State were doing everything to break down, and nothing to build up. I have visited their Legislature in session at Little Rock, seen and talked with their Governor, and am convinced in my own mind that they don't care "which way the cat jumps." Arkansas, as far as I can see, has made large crops, and the people are satisfied, and, had not Gov. Clayton, without cause, "raised a muss," and drawn all the available help from the cotton fields to make his uncalled-for militia, would to-day have more money within herself than she ever had. As it is, from actual observation, one-fourth of the cotton, from the mouth of the river to Fort Smith, is unpicked, while lazy negroes wear brass buttons and straps, and the nation starves and cotton rots! I can say most positively that I have yet the first man to find who appears to want any trouble, or any renewal of troubles. Gov. Clayton is undoubtedly under the control of bad advisers, for, as a man, he seems all right, yet he may be one of our Northern adventurers, of whom there are a plenty in the South who care for nothing, and work only for self.
